General review of the vaccination process

- If you do not have any mobility issues, you will approach the entrance and stand in a line that winds around under an awning for about 10 to 15 minutes before entering the facility, so dress appropriately for the temperature.

- Once you enter the facility, you'll go thru a winding line until you approach the registration desk with your license and insurance card if applicable. The service person will confirm your appointment and then hand you a small plastic card This is your "ID" for your visit. All of your information will be confirmed, and at this point your second appointment will be scheduled. Your appointment will be written on a small white card and you will also be given a set of post vaccination care instructions

- With your card in hand, you will then be put on another line that will get you to the actual vaccination area, you will sit down show them your card and the staff will administer your shot.

- After your vaccine, you will be given your plastic card once again, your appointment card will be returned to you by and you will be directed to the socially-distant, self-monitored waiting area where you will be instructed to wait for 15 to 20 minutes to ensure there are no negative side effects. Staff is all around should you feel any ill effects, but no one will check on you unless you ask. Once the required time has passed, and you feel well, (one last time!) take your plastic card to the staff member at the exit, hand it to them, and you are free to leave!
